The Woman of Charm.

There is probably no word a woman likes so well to hear applied to herself as "charming" Perhaps the near est approach we can make to a defi nition, or rather explanation of this quality is a deeply sympa thetie temperament, an upselfishness which considers only the pleasure and comfort of others and an abundant good nature, equal to all emergen-The proversor of these characteristics is always at peace with the world and enjoys life to the utmost: she always conduces to the pleasure of others. The woman of real, inherent charm is one whose goodness of heart prompts her to be kindly and courteous to everybody. Emerson's remark that good manners are made up of petty sacrifices is to the point, but the charming woman is not conscious of any sacrifice, rather, in her alone, to pararhrase Dryden, 'tis natural to please. Someone has said that the true lady is one who puts every one at his case, and in the fast analy tis this will be found correct -The Yoman Reactival

Spent some time at West Point. but was expelled. On being disowned by his adopted father he made a precarious living with his pen, editing various periodicals, writing criticisms and turaing out an occasional poem or short story, the most finished and exquisite that had yet appeared in America. "The Raven" was published in 1845 and almost immediately took rank as one of the great short poems of the world. "The Bells" and "Annabel Lee" had almost as great vogue. His remarkable short stories are still read widely. In 1847 Poe's wife died, and he was himself very ill. He never seemed to recover from the blow and two years later was picked up in the streets of Baltimore in a dying condition.

QUICK EYES OF THE WOMEN

They Have Extraordinary Paculty for Beeing Many Things and Taking in Every Detail.

Women have the most extraordinary faculty for seeing a great many things at once. For instance, they will remember every detail of a person's dress, manner, and personal appearance, even to the color of the hair and eyes, after a mere glimpse. This power is rare with men in general, though some have cultivated it. The gift belongs pre-eminently to women, however, who will often, without effort, take away the most vivid impres sions of people they have traveled with for a short time only and have never spoken to, or of people they have met by chance in the street

Women's eyes need to be as keen as they are kindly. In her konseleed all depends on them. Woman is to first to notice any little rift within the late of home life, and faffere the health of those she loves and has the care of, any lapse from the ne rustomed, any treable anexpressed that is making any one enhappy. More deficately beforeed, more sensitive than man, her name receives to pressions which to these of a differ ent, perhaps courser, fiber would also have no existence. Her intuition at times divine

HOW ROGERS GOT HIS START

Famous Sculptor, When Young Dry Goods Salesman, Made a Caricature of His Employer.

A. T. Stewart was shown one day by one of his confidential employed an amusing caricature of himself conin pencil.

"Good, good!" he laughed, "tiat's excellent. Who did it?"

"A young salesman at the liner counter. He scratched it off as you passed the other morning. I man aged to get it from him and now he's scared stiff for fear you'll see it," was the laughing reply.

"Scared stiff, is he?" said Mr. Stew art, with a twinkle in his eye. "Just send him to me, will you?"

A little later a slim youth entered Mr. Stewart's private office and said he understood he had been sent for Yes," said Mr. Stewart gravely, and holding up the sketch asked, "Did you

The lad grew pale and stammered I-I beg your pardon, sir-it was only a bit of fun-I meant no offense," That's all very well, but you'll have to give up your job here," The youth humbly protested, when Mr. Stewart burst out laughing and said: "Don't say any more, my boy. I'm only jeking. Your sketch is excellent and as it would be a sin to keep a man of your artistic talent be hind a linen counter I propose to supply you with the means to study art. Mr. Stewart's proposition was grate fully accepted and it was thus that John R. Rogers, the sculptor, began his artistic career.

Lord Brongham's Oratory. We have no orator in the least like Lord Brougham since the close of Brougham's public career. Everything that nature could do, so far as appearance, manner and voice were confrom being a great orator; and yet, a great orator he undoubtedly was. I wonder what the house of lords just now would think of a peer who gesticulated and beliewed as Brougham was in the habit of doing. But it was impossible to listen to Brougham and not be carried away by the force of his intellect, by his torrent of words, by the sudden whirl and eddy of his rapid illustrations, and by the longer and shorter stretches of quietude and repose into which his argument occa sionally flowed.—From Justin Mc Carthy's Reminiscenses.

He is Still Inquiring.

Fourteen years ago, when Thomas Cooper, living on a farm two miles from Lexington, Mich., was thirteen years old, he began walking into the town every day and asking for mail at the post office. Thomas is now twentyseven years old, and he has not missed one single week day in all those years Regularly every morning he has taken the four-mile walk, and he is still at it.

It may also be stated that he has not, up to this date, received a single letter, but he is not discouraged. He believes one will come for him some day, even if it is only a dunning let

If Was Bashfulness. A school teacher in a town in Bavaria has been arrested for a singu lar offense. He caught a boy of four teen and a girl two years younger whispering during school hours, and he made them sit in the same sea with their arms tied together. Both were so bashful that they finally faint ed away, and their parents had the teacher arrested for cruelty. The case hasn't been tried yet, but it is safe to say that nothing will be done to the

MAKING OF PLAYING CARDS

Supposed to Have Been Invented for Amusement of Deranged King of France.

The invention of playing cards has been variously attributed to the Chinese, Hindoos, Arabians and Romans. but cards as now used were invented by Jacques Grirgonneur, a painter, in Paris, in the fourteenth century. They were supposed to have been first made for the amusement of Charles VI. of France, who was deranged. French had particular names for the 12 court cards. The four kings were David, Alexander, Caesar and Charles; the four queens, Argine, Esther, Ju-dith and Pailas; the four knaves or knights, Ogier the Dane, Lancelot, La Hire and Hector de Garland.

Cards seem originally to have been brought to England from Spain, probably having been introduced into that country by the Moors. The clubs, in Spanish, were not trefoils, as with us, but cudgels, I. r., "bastos," and the spades or swords, "espadas," Cards at first were stamped from wood blocks in outline and filled in by hand, but after the invention of engraving the host artists engraved them on copper and struck them off at once. "Colum blues" were spades, "rabbits," clubs; diamonds, and bearts. Hamon figures, opposed to those of flowers and animals, were the ancestors of court cards.

MILK 131 THE COCOANUT

Delusion That Fluid Has Anything in Common With Real Milk Dissipated.

Probably everybody has wondered at times what kind of stuff the "milk" of the cocoanut is. One inducement generally held out by the dealer to the prospective purchaser is that the nuts are "all milky." Recent analysis, however, have dissipated the delusion that the fluid has any thing in common with real milk. It contains only four per cent. of solids. consisting chiefly of sugars 28 per cent, the balance being made up of mineral matter and tartaric acid.

More than half of the sugar present is mannitol, the sweet principle of manna which is sometimes found also in wine as a product of normal grape sugar. The question has been discussed as to whether it would be profitable to extract the cocoanut water for the sake of its cane sugar but as this amounts to only one tenth per cent, the process would not be commercially successful, in spite of the water being a waste product. Even if the water contained five per cent, of sugar, as some specimens appear to have shown, the recovery of this amount would be unprofitable The juice of the sugar cane yields Bearly 20 per cent. of sugar.

Origin of Firewater.

When the Hudson's Bay Trading company began its trading among the Indians it was found that by seiling the Indians liquor they could more easily be induced to trade their peltries.

The first whisky or intoxicant of in ferior quality was distilled in England and brought to America in large bar rels, but in transporting it overland it was found more convenient to divide it into small kegs. The traders soon became aware of the fact that by diluting the whisky with water more furs could be obtained. This was praclearned that good whisky poured on fire would cause it to flame up, where as had the whisky been diluted the fire would be quenched. It was by this simple experiment that the term "firewater" became a common word among Indians.

A chief who had experienced the bad effects of whisky among his people said it was most certainly distilled from the hearts of wildcats and the tongues of women from the effects it produced.-Red Man.

Warming the Devil.

An almost incredible case of superstition is reported from Rihal, near Grosswordein, Hungary. The place has never before experienced an earth quake, but recently a series of vioent shocks shook the neighborhood. some being so violent that the church bells rang. The villagers were greatly alarmed and consulted an old womin quack of the place, who declared that the shocks were the groans of the devil, who suffered cold and hung Thereupon the peasants threw a number of calves and goats into s chasm outside the village to appeare the devil's hunger and set fire to the bishop's forest in the neighborhood to provide him with warmth. The quack and several peasants have been ar-

What She Missed.

"Is there anything worse," sighed the pretty girl, "than to be hungry and remember all the good things to eat you might have had but left on some other occasion? The other day I was at the swellest reception I ever attended and the things to eat were simply beavenly. I will confess I did justice to everything that was handed me, but somehow I didn't get gny of the rolled mandwiches with water cress in the middle, or any of the delicious marrons glace. And, oh, the one of those appetizing sandwiches. and that my mouth has watered for those marrons! And today for lunch I had to eat corned beef hash."

BALL GAME OF CHEROKEES

important Function is Preceded by Song and Dance Which Lasts All Night.

The ball game as played by the Cherokees is as important to them as football or any other popular game is to other people. The eastern band of Cherokees live on the Qualla reservation in western North Carolina.

The neighborhood in which I live. writes an Indian girl in the Red Man, is divided into four main sections, namely: Yellow Hill, Soco, Big Cove and Birdtown. The Indiana living in one of these sections will challenge those living in another to a game of ball. They choose their players and agree upon the time and place for playing the game. It is generally played in an open field far different from the well-graded field upon which the game of football is played.

The evening before the game the indians, the women included, hold a dance in their respective sections of the country. These dances are held in the open air, usually near some small stream. The women do the singing while the men dance. In their songs they make all kinds of remarks about those of the opposing side. These dances continue all night long. From the time of the dances until after the games the players are not allowed to est any food.

The following day the people from the different sections gather at the appointed place to witness the game They either sit or stand around the edge of the field. The ball players each have two sticks similar to those used in the game of lacrosse, only smaller. The ball is tossed up in the center of the field and the game begins. The object is to get it around two poles placed at each end of the field a certain number of times. They cannot pick up the ball in their hands. The players who succeed in getting the ball around the poles at the end of the field the greatest number of times win the game. Red Man Magazine.

WOLF HUNTING WITH EAGLES

Kirghiz Train Great Birds to Hunt Gazelle, Foxes and Even Wolves.

All wanderers are lovers of the chase, but for sheer love of sport and daring exploits the Kirghiz take the palm, declares a writer to the Wide World Magazine. Central Asia is the home of falconry, which was not in troduced into Europe until the Crusaders brought back falcons with them from their eastern wanderings. But imagine the ambition of the men who fly their birds at woives and foxes instend of at qualls and partridges! Not content with hunting game birds with small falcons, the Kirghiz capture and train the great golden engles, with which they bunt such game as gazelle foxes and even wolves. A well mounted Kirghiz falconer carrying on his wrist one of these magnificent birds. is a fine sight. The weight of the eagle is such that the owner requires a support for his wrist, and the bunters are usually to be seen with a little wooden bracket that supports the arm against the hip. The eagles are hood ed, as all falcons are, but can only be used in winter when they are hungry and keen. In summer they are fed on marmote and live a restful life, sitting in the sun in front of the tent When gaselle or wolves are the objects of the chase, the eagle a small breed, the dogs running in and pulling down the quarry when the eagles have sufficiently bewildered it

Hanged the Clever Forger.

Of curious petitions against the death penalty being enforced, one recalls the eighteenth century case of William Ryland, who was sentenced for forging a bill for £7,114 on the East India House. The forgery was a work of art. No less than thirty signatures were imitated, and at the trial not one of the victims could swear that the signature was not his own. However, with the help of the paper manufacturers, Ryland's guilt was brought home. Then came the petition of his friends. So clever a man ought never to be hanged, they pleaded; his craftsmanship should him. It gained a respite; he was allowed to finish a fine engraving he had begun, but nothing more. Though the engraver was a favorite of George III., that king quite failed to see how a forgery could be excused on the ground that it was a clever forgery.

Raises Young to Eat.

The paradise fish, one of the new wonders of natural history, raises its young to eat. The habits of this peculiar fish are also strikingly similar to those of a great many parents who show tittle more consideration for their offspring. The female drops her eggs carelessly anywhere she may be and the male gathers them up and places them in a bubble nest, which he blows, and awaits the hatching. When they are sufficiently grown he eats them, keeping them housed up until he needs them. Some of the Httle ones escape, of course, and as they are prolific breeders, the specie is perpetuated.
